'DROUGHT GARDEN'

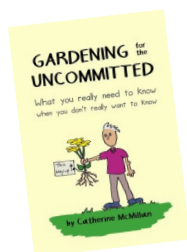

“East Anglia has long been classed as semi-arid and with summers getting hotter drought-tolerant plants are ever more important.

The easiest way to garden is to always remember: Right plant, right place.
Go with nature, not against it.

Silver leaves are a strong sign that the plant can cope with hot, dry conditions: the silver reflecting away the sun's rays.

From this starting point it was natural to follow a colour scheme of blues & purples and whites & silvers.

As a bonus, most of the plants provide year-round colour.”
